

Bitterns In Rice Project Update

Description

Bitterns In Rice Project Update

We're pleased to launch the Bitterns in Rice Project website.

<http://www.bitternsinrice.com.au>

Please share the link through your networks. It's the one-stop-shop for information and updates on our project.

We're also pleased to inform you, if you're not already aware, that the Tracking Bunyip Birds component has officially begun, with our first bittern away with a satellite transmitter. "Robbie" is a young male from Coleambally, and the results are absolutely captivating.Â

Just a few hours ago, we learnt that he has now crossed two state borders and is 557 kilometres from where we attached the transmitter only 11 days ago. The website will be updated regularly. He's on the move, discovering the Australian landscape for the first time.

If you want to receive updates as they're posted, be sure to sign up to email updates on the website. Alternatively, you can like the Bitterns in Rice Project on Facebook or follow me on Twitter @Matt_HerringOzÂ

Best regards,

Matt Herring for The Bitterns in Rice Project.

Category

1. Latest News

Date Created

2015/05/04

Author

eileen